LIBRARY SCHOOL AT INDIANAPOLIS BURNED

RE-OPENS APRIL 23
FALL TERM BEGINS OCT. 10
EXAMINATIONS: JUNE 20, AUG. 14 AND SEPT. 12

The Library School of the Winona Technical Institute at Indianapolis was completely destroyed by a fire which occurred April 11th at three o'clock in the morning. At eight o'clock the Library School students assembled in the President's residence and, with many expressions of loyalty and appreciation, voted to continue their course. Fortunately the Easter vacation, which began April 12th, allowed the directors of the Winona Technical Institute and the Library School time to readjust losses.

Commodious quarters have been assigned in the Graphic Arts building. The equipment of the Library School, including a collection of some 1500 volumes which was completely destroyed, will be replaced.

Owing to the loss by fire of the forty or more applications for next year's course in the Library School, if the class is not filled after the first examination other examinations will be held Aug. 14th and Sept. 12th.

The school course is much the same as that offered in other library schools of the country. It aims to cultivate in the student discrimination in the selection of books, and by technical exercises with actual books selected for the purpose, gives familiarity with modern library methods of preparing books for circulation, and of making them known to the public.

The kind offers of books and study outlines from librarians throughout the country have been greatly appreciated by the Winona Technical Institute and Library School.

SPECIAL CHILDREN'S LIBRARY COURSE

April 10 – May 22, 1907

Miss Harriet E. Hassler, Instructor
Pratt Institute School of Library Training
Children's Librarian, Portland, Oregon

Librarians, assistant librarians, and grade teachers will be interested in the six weeks course of special instruction in Library work with schools to be conducted by Miss Harriet E. Hassler at the Winona Technical Institute Library School at Indianapolis, April 10 – May 22, 1907.

This work is suggestive. It is intended to give the regular students of the school and a limited number of others interested in the subject, opportunity to become familiar with the best methods of interesting children in books and reading.

Parents, teachers and sociologists are awakening to a realization of the value of books for recreation, information and inspiration. The aim of this course is to give instruction in introducing young people to books which must of necessity exert an influence on the future citizens of the commonwealth.

The following subjects will be presented:

Review of children's library work in the United States
Selection of books
- a. General Reading
- b. Humor
- c. Special subjects
- d. Biography
- e. History and travel
- f. Literature
- g. School reference work

Reading Lists. Anniversaries
Picture Bulletins
Story Hours
Children's Rooms and their administration
Classification and cataloging of children's books
Children's Librarians

The required course is free to the Library School students of the class of 1907. They are given due credit for it.

A limited number of special students may be admitted to the course after given satisfactory proof that the knowledge thus gained is to be used in advancing the library interests of some community or institution.

Ten dollars is the tuition fee, payable on or before April 10, due from each special student registered in the children's library course.
